ANOTHER RICH FIND IN THE LEVIAS SECTION.

With Coal on all Sides and Mineral in Abundance Marion has a Bright Future and will Yet Be a Second Birmingham Unless all Signs Fail.

Our Levias correspondent says: "Prof" Cook, the real mining man of Salem, was in this section last week hunting for mineral property. Mr Cook is an experienced mineralogist from Colorado, and we hope he will secure property in our midst.

The immense smokestack for the mills being erected by the Eagle Flour Spar company at the Cullen mine near Salem, is at the depot and is by far the largest ever seen in these parts. One would think it was built for some big Birmingham furnace. The tallest man can stand erect in it lying flat as it does in the car.

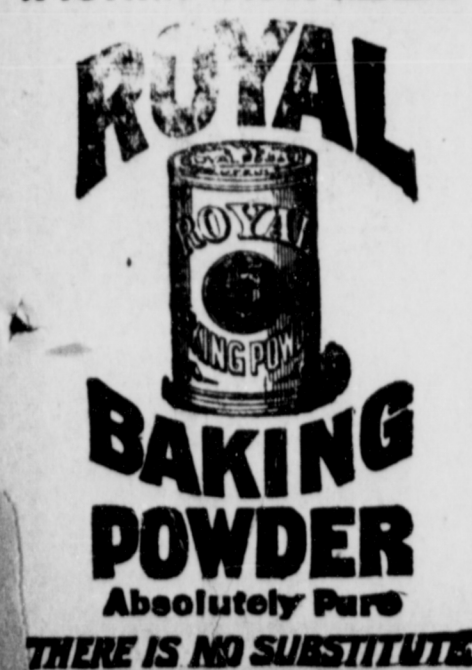

Down in the Hurricane settlement above Tolu, on the road to Crittenden springs A. F. Karger, the big furniture manufacturer of Evansville, and his partners, Temme and others, are buying up a great deal of land, which is an indication of the confidence they have in this district.

Last week they closed the deal for Ulie Threlkeld's land, 84 acres at $1,000, and also for Geo. Stallions 198 acres at $2,400.

The Wheatecroft Mineral company, operating at Mexico, this county, in their shaft which is 80 feet deep, run a drift 35 feet in a northerly direction and struck a fine vein of grinding flour spar, 8 1/2 feet wide, which is one of the best things in the district. They are now taking out six tons daily and have closed a contract for their entire output until Jan 1st, 1905, to the Kentucky Flour Spar company, and it will be used for their grinding trade at the mill on the I. C. R. R. at Marion. The fortunate owners of this stock at present are Irving, H. Wheatecroft, A. E. Cullen, H. Curry, Ben Curry, Jas Edwards and Mr. Hudson, all of Wheatecroft, and T. A. Conway, of Marion.

The Shady Grove Mining company, operating on the Lindley land near Salem, have 100 tons of fine mineral on the dump, and at least a thousand tons in sight. They are now getting timber ready to do some needed work on their shaft, which is down sixty feet. J. B. Simpson, the well known merchant, is superintending the work for the company. J. D. Elder, the druggist, of Shady Grove is also a partner. From all reports they have a nice property. A good vein was struck at 15 feet, and it improved the deeper they went. What they have out is about one-half flour spar and one-half barites. They will begin hauling their product for shipment soon.

IT IS A MATTER OF HEALTH

Our New Salem correspondent says Capt Haas with a force of hands spent all of last week fixing the road between Marion and Salem, putting in double sleepers and double floors on all the bridges, preparatory to hauling down the big machinery for the Cullen plant. The 200 h. p. boiler will be hauled by two powerful traction engines.

Coal of the best variety has been found in Hardin county and the mining of it will be carried on during the summer and fall. The mines are on the land of Job Catt, of Rock creek, and promise to be very remunerative. They have gone back in the hill 145 feet and now has a 42 inch vein. It is believed they will reach a 4 foot vein shortly.

S. G. McWade, superintendent of the mines, brought in a nice lump Saturday, and informs us they would have plenty, and just as soon as the road commissioners work the roads they will start to haul it to this place.

The coal has been tested and is found to be all right, and no doubt the demand for it will be great — Hardin Era.

This is on a line of our mineral veins, and only a few miles north of Marion.

Our Frances correspondent has the following:

The Wheatecroft Mining company has developed a fine foot vein of fine grinding spar on the land near here recently bought of P. S. Maxwell.

Engineer Geo. M. Russell, who has charge of the machinery at the Pogue mine, asks us to state to the mining editor of the PRESS that his pump is in perfect working order, and easily the best one in these "diggings".

The pumps at the Hodge and Asbridge mines have been giving considerable trouble recently, but we hope in a few days to be able to tell about great progress at the two great spar producers of last year.

Wm S. Lowery sold to James L. Harris, the mineral interest in 86 acres of land for $2,500.

T. C. Carter sold to R. M. Pogue for $1900.

Jas D. Hopewell and others have sold their mineral interests to the Keystone Mineral and Mining company.

Another rich find in the Levias section!

George C. Gray and J. M. Persons, the lucky men, have recently leased Mrs Martha Franks' land and have uncovered a 7 foot vein of very fine flour spar. Our Levias correspondent says:

"Mrs Martha F. Franks has leased her mineral to Messrs. J. M. Persons and G. C. Gray. They have struck a fine bed of spar at a depth of 7 feet. Of course both parties are delighted and their neighbors rejoice with them, in this new find in our section"; and from parties who have seen the specimens, we learn that the vein is of exceptionally fine quality. Mr Persons is recognized as one of our best miners, and his judgment is much sought by people with mineral lands to develop, and Mr Gray is indeed fortunate to have gotten him for a partner in this deal.

The Franks land is near the G. W. Eaton property and the T. C. Carter land, on both of which such fine minerals have been found.

This great strike on the Franks place bids fair to pay the fortunate gentlemen several thousands a year income. In speaking of it Mr Persons said: "This mine is not for sale; it's good enough for Mr Gray and I to keep. Why shouldn't we have a few of the good things;" and everybody who knows them says "Amen!" for the sun does not shine upon two bigger hearted men.

FROM SELDEN, KANSAS.

SELDEN, KAN., May 31, 1904.—DEAR PRESS: As I just left old Crittenden six weeks ago I would like to give my friends there, through the columns of your valuable paper, a description of a cyclone, or rather cyclones, for there were two that struck our town this afternoon.

At about 4 o'clock six cyclones formed southwest, in sight of our town. Two moved off toward the north, two to the south, and two headed direct for our town. They looked to be about two hundred yards apart when within a mile of town, moving parallel with each other, but as they came rolling and twisting I could see they were getting closer together. They were moving slowly, not so fast as one would expect. But on they came, picking up everything that was in front of them and giving it a jerk, causing it to disappear in the blackness of the cloud.

One was coming straight to the place where I stood, without changing its course in the least that I could see. The large school building, which was about eighty rods from where I was standing, was in direct line between me and the largest cyclone. I stood and watched to see what it did with that building, but when it was within fifty feet, as it looked to me, it just seemed to jump far enough west to miss the building. I then picked up the baby and waited until it was within forty rods and ran for the cellar. I just got in when shingles, planks and things began to tumble around and then everything was in total darkness.

for about ten seconds. This is all I saw of the cyclone until it passed us and went on northeast to pay its respects to other anxious watchers. I judge I was in the cellar thirty seconds. When I came out the first thing I saw was that a large barn and grainery that stood about 80 feet from the hotel was moved back about forty feet, and part of it standing with the roof to the ground, the rest gone.

Here I will say that I jumped over the hotel without doing it any damage. I then looked farther out. There were lots that had handsome dwellings, windmills, stables, chicken houses, fences, etc., not three minutes before was now as bare as the prairie, except now and then plank split into kindling wood and piles of debris at other places.

My next thought was of the children who were attending funeral services of an aged lady at the church, about one hundred and fifty yards off, and there I started, but met them about half way. They said they were not hurt but didn't know how many were. I went on to the church, and there found about fifty teams had been hitched in the church yard; but now horses, buggies and all kind of rubbish was blown in piles; soon the horses were free, but there was not a whole buggy on the ground. Some of the horses were hurt, others ran away, the church was blown off its foundation and badly wrecked.

When I reached the people some of them were crying, praying, hallooing, others hunting for mothers, fathers, and all who were dear to them, but none seemed to be hurt. Presently I saw good old neighbor Rodgers lying down; some one pulled up a wagon and after we lifted him in I asked if he was hurt very much; oh, said he, I had a baby in my arms and tried to protect her by holding her against the house, but when it blew off the foundation it knocked me down and a ladder caught my leg and the church came down on the ladder and held me there. Just then a buggy and team ran over me and wrung the child from my arms, and then the darkness came and I do not know what became of that sweet little baby. Here he answered my question and said he thought his leg was just bruised but he could not walk and as the wagon started he said, "Oh, that sweet little baby, I wish I knew it was not hurt," and wept as though his heart would break. But he was made to rejoice when some one told him that the baby went through without a scratch.

There were three hundred in the church when the storm hit it, and the same number when it was over, for the doors were held to prevent them from getting out. Had they succeeded in getting out no doubt a large number would have been killed by the flying debris. If the church had fell we can't tell what would have happened.

No one was badly hurt, but several who were in their dwellings were hurt some. One man was hurled about thirty feet in his house. Then it was blown off of him and left him with only some flesh wounds. An old lady was blown about fifty yards but was not hurt.

The two cyclones that struck this town came together near the church, and in that part it swept everything clean before it. I do not know the number of houses torn away or blown down, but no lives were lost.

I have not begun to tell what might be told about the destruction in this place, but we are all so glad that our lives are spared that we consider the property as nothing.

Old friends all ask how I like Kansas. I think it a fine country and we are all satisfied, if the cyclone did start some of our things back toward Kentucky; but how far they have gone we will never know.

With best wishes for all of our old Crittenden county friends, I will close.

C. C. HOLSTON.

TO WED JUNE 15.

Former Louisville Girl to Wed a New Yorker.

Cards have been received here announcing the marriage of Miss Evalyn Marshall Shelby to Mr. George Pennell Roberts to take place on Wednesday, June 15, at 2 o'clock p. m., at the residence of her sister, Mrs. John W. Wilson.

The wedding will be a quiet, home affair, and only the immediate friends and families of the contracting parties will be present. On their return from their bridal tour they will go to house keeping in the Sayre residence on Salem street, which they have leased during the absence of Mrs. Sayre in Philadelphia and the east.

Miss Shelby, the bride-to-be, came of two of the old and aristocratic families of the state, her mother having been a Miss Marshall, a descendant of Chief Justice John Marshall and her father the late Reginald L. Shelby of Louisville, who was born and reared near Eddyville and was a grandson of Governor Isaac Shelby. Miss Shelby's grandmother was a daughter of Crittenden Lyon, one of the first settlers of Lyon county, and for sixteen years a representative of that district in congress. She has traveled extensively and has spent much of her life in Louisville and Dallas, Tex., and has taken advantage of every opportunity to improve herself, until now she has few equals in literature and art, and is an eloquentist of marked ability.

The groom to be, came to Marion a year ago from Chicago, but is a New Yorker by birth. He has traveled over much of the United States and has spent several years on the Pacific coast. He is now engaged in the mining business and is secretary and treasurer of the Crittenden Mining Co., which has extensive deposits of spar in several sections of this county. He is a gentleman of exceptional moral worth and stands high with every one who knows him in a business capacity.

STORM ECHOES.

The electric storm which was seen and felt at Marion and other nearby towns on Thursday last was accompanied by considerable damage and some loss of life. The Morganfield Sun says:

Just before twelve o'clock yesterday a severe electrical storm, accompanied by heavy rain, occurred. The lightning struck Robert Cromwell's residence, tearing a great hole in the side of the building and setting it on fire. As soon as the alarm was turned in the fire department responded, but the blaze had been extinguished by Joe Cromwell and Harry Ford before the hose wagon reached the scene. Fortunately none of the family was at home, as it is quite likely had any one been in the house at the time there would have been a fatality. The residence was insured.

At Sturgis, during the storm, two boys, sons of Robt Christian, were struck by lightning. Neither of them was killed outright but it is reported one of them was fatally injured. Telephone wires have been out of working order ever since the storm, and we could not learn particulars of the accident.

At DeKoven Arch Montgomery the fifteen year old son of Mr and Mrs George Montgomery, was struck by lightning and killed. His body lay within thirty yards of his home all day.

At Sturgis John McKee's house was struck by lightning and burned to the ground.

Norton, Kan., June 2.—A tornado struck the little town of Selden, west of Norton, on the Rock Island railway, demolishing the church, five dwellings, and destroying much farm property.

A funeral service was being conducted in the church at the time, and 300 persons were in attendance. A dozen persons were hurt but none seriously.

Much damage was done to farm property in the path of the storm, beyond Selden, but no loss of life has been reported.

W. D. Brantley recently moved to Selden, Kan., from this county. We hope he and his family are safe.

Hutchinson, Kan., June 2.—This section and all Southwestern Kansas was drenched by a heavy rain accompanied by hail. Hail broke every window on the north side of an eastbound Rock Island passenger train and the broken glass cut many of the passengers.

Tekamah, Neb., June 2.—A disastrous cyclone swept over this town, wrecking and destroying 20 houses and injuring nineteen people.

Ardmore, I. T., June 2.—White head was visited last night by an electric and wind storm, doing much damage to buildings and the growing fruit crop. Hundreds of acres of cotton will have to be replanted.

Princeton, Kan. June 2.—A tornado at Cold Water, a small town near here, wrecked many barns and destroyed much property; the tornado struck ten miles southeast of Dodge City, doing heavy damage to farm property and crops, but so far no casualties are reported.

Sterling, Col., June 2.—One thousand feet of Union Pacific railroad track over Pawnee creek, this county, has been entirely covered with water as the result of a waterspout. No lives are reported as lost so far, nor have any ranchmen reported loss of stock, but many valuable fields of hay are completely ruined.

St Louis, June 2.—Reports coming in from various sections of the city showing considerable and widespread damage from the thunderstorm that raged today.

Last Thursday a destructive cyclone passed over part of Illinois in view of Smithland, and for a while it looked as though it would reach here. The people here were greatly excited for awhile as they watched it as it came down the river, but when it turned in another direction and they saw that all danger had passed, then of course no one was scared? The little village of New Liberty, opposite this place, in Illinois, was blown into kindling wood but no lives were lost.—Smithland Banner.

A report over the wires here announces that a terrific tornado visited Dallas, Texas, Thursday. It was learned that the tornado hit in the central part of the city and caused death and destruction for miles. All the wires were down and no details could be obtained.

Glasgow, Ky., June 3.—A heavy rain storm yesterday evening blew down Mount Pleasant Baptist church and several houses at Roseville, five miles from here.

Arkansas City, Kan., June 2.—A tornado struck Glencoe, a town of 1,000, in Payne county, Oklahoma, today, demolishing five residences and destroying the Methodist church. Several persons were hurt, none seriously. Great damage was done to farm property.

Henderson, Ky., June 3.—The electrical storm here late yesterday afternoon badly damaged several residences and burned W. P. Beverley's stable. There was a heavy rain, which damaged the corn and tobacco crops.

Booneville, Ind., June 2.—Jno. Gentry, Jr., Opal Gentry, and a Gentry baby were struck by lightning and killed this afternoon. The father was also struck and will die. The mother and nine other children were shocked but their injuries will not prove serious.

A Successful Teacher.

ED. PRESS: Prof M. C. Wright, one of the ablest teachers in this county, has just closed a very successful term of school at the Lola school house. He taught our fall term and gave such universal satisfaction that the people engaged him to teach a spring term of ten weeks, which closed May 27 with a nice entertainment at night; the little people, together with the larger ones, recited some very nice pieces, and all did credit to their teacher.

Prof Wright has taught several terms in our district and was offered the position for the coming fall session but declined, to accept an offer from the Eli district.

Prof Wright has been teaching in the schools of Livingston county for twenty-six years, and everywhere he has taught he is held in high esteem as a teacher and a gentleman. A Patron

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN,

Gowned in Elegant Costumes, at St. Louis Worlds Fair.

The management of the Palais du Costume on the "Pike" at the Fair, has just closed a deal which will probably add much to the popularity of the exposition as it will be seen in St. Louis.

It is generally known that the Palais du Costume was one of the features of the Paris Exposition most admired by the public.

In one sense of the term it is a historical collection of gowns worn by women from the earliest authentic periods to the present. It was made by M. Felix, the famous Parisian costumer, and it required years of time, expense and labor as it was seen at the Paris Exposition, and it is here in its entirety.

It is the most pretentious gown show that has been seen in any country, and in addition to the commercial value of the exhibit, is historically correct.

These costumes will be seen on an immense stage, behind a crystal glass curtain, and will be arranged in tableaux, representing different epochs of fashion's history.

One tableaux will show the famous meeting between Francis I. of France and Henry VIII. of England, known in history as the "Field of the Cloth of Gold," during which sumptuous function these rival monarchs vied each with the other in the splendor of their display. Another interesting feature of the exhibition is the tableau showing the eve of the coronation of Josephine and Napoleon. The coronation gown used in this scene alone cost $50,000 is pure sable, and a train nearly 20 feet long and literally covered with solid gold bees and is a perfect copy of the robe worn by Empress Josephine at the coronation ceremony. It is a historical fact that Napoleon came near divorcing his wife when the bill for this dress was presented to him.

In addition there are scenes showing the costumes of the ancient Greeks and Romans, of the middle ages in Europe, the period of the directorate in France, and of the restoration and other stage pictures showing vividly the costumes and customs of women who lived and do live in "darkest Africa," from remote Thibet— which country is now attracting much attention because of an armed invasion by the British army, from Lapland, China, Japan, Co. ca. In fact M. Felix, as any one knows who went to the Paris Exhibition, ransacked the earth for the collection of gowns which made him famous in name, but bankrupted him financially.

It was purchased from him and taken to Earl's Court, London, England, where it was a sensation. After being shipped to New York City it required twenty-five cars each sixty-four feet long, to bring

The only kind of consumption to fear is "neglected consumption."

People are learning that consumption is a curable disease. It is neglected consumption that is so often incurable.

At the faintest suspicion of consumption get a bottle of Scott's Emulsion and begin regular doses.

The use of Scott's Emulsion at once, has, in thousands of cases, turned the balance in favor of health.

Neglected consumption does not exist where Scott's Emulsion is.

the material to the Fair.

To give the exhibit additional popularity with the public it was decided some time ago by the directors of the company to have the gowns worn by living models so that the exhibitions would be in the nature of receptions. Beautiful young women, one from each State in the Union are seen, on one occasion wearing the gowns of the period of Louis XV of France the directorate of 1795 to 1799, in France, of la restoration, and in addition also wear some of the marvelous creations that have made the name of Worth, Felix, and Causet famous the world over in their line of millinery.

In addition to the ladies who represent each State, the company was fortunate a few days ago to engage what is known the country over as "the first row of ladies" of the famous Anna Held theatrical combination. These pretty women were engaged not only for their theatrical ability to wear the dresses in an impressive way on the stage, but also for their beauty, and as a whole, are the most attractive women who have at any time in the past been seen on any stage at one time.

SHE WOULD SING.

BY O. G. W.

She sang—then all the guests grew still

And gazed upon her form;

'Twas like the awful, startling hush

That comes before the storm.

She sang, and then the lookers-on

Sat up a mighty roar.

And with a terror-stricken look

Made madly for the door.

Oh, wild and weird the notes she gave,

Defying rhyme and rule;

E'en her accompanist went mad

On his piano stool,

But still she calmly warbled on,

Poor "Home, Sweet Home" the air,

Until she found herself alone—

They all had gathered there!

THEY FOLLOW ON,

The sands of life run slowly down
The path is getting worn;
One by one they follow on,
Life's work is almost done.

'Tis sad to see those fellows fade,
Boys with never a fear.
Our gallant comrades, heroes made

By cause our hearts held dear.

Our grand old cause—'twas ever dear

To those whose hearts were true,

They meet on fields in another sphere,

Death—the ranks they fall

As one by one they go.

WOMAN AND FASHION

Perfect Harmony Required.

The well dressed girl insists upon material and trimming being in perfect harmony, and she also buys with a view to durability as well. For waists crepe de chine, taffetas and liberty satins are the favorites and are in great demand. All will stand shoulder air and hard usage, and, while not so suggestive of summer coolness, they are little warmer than the sheer stuffs. The above illustration pictures a waist of golden brown crepe de chine. The cuffs, front panel and long shoulder piece, which extends to the cuff, are of silk Cluny lace dyed to match material. The deep grille is of self tone lousine.—New York Mail.

A Flower Spring.

"A good ostrich fall makes a good flower spring" is an old saying with the milliners, and the spring of 1904 will bear out the truth of this statement. Roses promise to take the lead this spring. The tiny button variety in single and double garlands edge the brims, encircle the crowns or otherwise trim the hats. Medium size roses are used as garniture in single or double wreaths, and large roses are often used singly. When the large flower is employed tiny green leaves bordering the brims make a charming effect.

A large white chip picture hat with a flare front brim is decorated with a wreath of small, half open rosebuds in white and pale pink. Rose foliage in which the leaves are scarcely larger than maidenhair fern fronds the under brim. Pale blue ribbon velvet is arranged around the upper side of the brim, and a large loop bow of the same is on the under side at the left back.

The Girls' Sweaters.

The girl who believes in physical culture and who takes her exercises night and morning with systematic regularity, to her the sweater is of course indispensable. But even for this purpose the sweater is a much more shapely garment than it used to be. The stitches are often arranged closer together as they near the waist line, giving the figure a tapering effect. These sweaters for gymnasium, home exercise wear and outdoor sports are made up in a great variety of attractive models. Some are made in the conventional sweater design and have the only opening at the neck. They are frequently knitted in the English vest stitch and in shaded yarn, so that they have a changeable effect.

For a Little Girl.

This design shows a charming little frock for a child, having two features that continue in vogue, the box plaited style and the Russian idea of closing. The effect is very pretty of the double breasted front, which is outlined by a narrow backward turning tuck and two rather wide plaits on either side. This little frock can be made of any soft woolen material suitable for children's wear. The matter of trimming around the collar and cuffs is exceptional. This idea is also good to follow in making tub frocks, using white madras, duck, pique, linen or chambray and embroidery inserting for the trimming.

INGRAIN CARPET RUGS.

Made at Home, Very Pretty, Soft and Almost Everlasting.

Rugs are most useful things in the scheme of summer furnishing. Beautiful ones may be made from strips of old ingrain carpet. Nothing could feel softer under the foot, and if the carpet has pretty colors in it the rug becomes "a thing of beauty" and almost "a joy forever," so durable is it. A writer in the New Idea Magazine has the following to say about this kind of rug:

For a foundation take a piece of strong material the size of the rug wanted. Denim or duck is preferable, and if a dark shade is used the rug will look neat underneath without lining. Since large ones become too heavy to handle as a whole, especially if the sewing is done upon a machine, it is better to cut the foundation into two or three pieces and sew the pieces together when finished.

Make bias a strip of the carpet and then cut it into strips about one and one-third inches wide. Sew one of these across the foundation directly through the center of the strip. Turn up one edge and sew another strip through the center also, as close to the first as you can, continuing this process until the foundation is covered. The stitching when viewed upon the underside should be from one-third to one-half of an inch apart. Of course the closer and more evenly the strips are put on the firmer and more durable the rug. After a number have been sewed on each should be partially frayed. As these are bias they fray easily and stand up, a soft, furry pile that feels comfortable underfoot. If the fraying is done unevenly the top of the rug should be sheared smooth and swept free of the lint. Short ends of the strips may be pieced in and never be noticed when all are frayed and clipped, so that every scrap of the carpet can be used.

We have a rug made out of old carpet to start with that has been a floor mat for six years and is still too pretty and serviceable to throw away.

Cleaning Lacquered Brass.

As every one knows, lacquer is put on brass for the purpose of preventing rust, verdigris, etc., but notwithstanding this lacquered brass sometimes becomes soiled, and in that case the following is a good way to clean it: It must be immersed in hot, strong soda and water and brushed with soap. While still covered with the lather it should be dipped in very hot water and after remaining there a minute or two should be lifted into cold water and subsequently dried. It should not be necessary to polish the brass after this process, and it must be remembered that the lacquer is only a preparation laid on the surface and is liable to wear off if the article be subjected to rough treatment.

No Grease In These.

There is a housekeeper in Maine whose doughnuts are famous not only in her own home, but throughout the neighborhood. She attributes a great part of their popularity and healthfulness to this little finishing touch. She has a bowl of hot water on the stove, and as each doughnut is removed from the kettle it is plunged for a moment into the water, thus removing any superfluous fat. The need and value of this are shown by the grease coated water and by the added delicacy and healthful nature of these most popular doughnuts, says a Good Housekeeping correspondent.

The French Way With Veal.

Veal is tender when it is killed, and all that is necessary is to have the animal heat thoroughly out of the body and the "rigor" of the muscles relaxed before it is fit for food. The proper way of treating veal is to pound the fibers, as the French do, as some ignorant Americans treat beef—a barbarous way to treat such a noble meat. It breaks the fibers and lets out the juices. Veal is not hurt by breaking the fibers.

Finest Footwear.

The pretty little mules shown in the illustration from Vogue seem made by fairy fingers, so delicately fashioned are they in every particular. The Louis XVI. heel, while not exaggerated in height, has the grace of an extreme model, and the rather broad shank affords a greater rest to the wearer. The most exquisite silks and brocaded satins are used in making the linings being of the dominant shade of the outfit. Ribbon trimmings around the edge are sometimes used, and fancy cords are seen on some of the best models. Old brocades are often pressed into use for their fashioning and make extraordinarily artistic models. The foot looks only about half its size in these mules.

Sued by His Doctor.

"A doctor here has sued me for $12.50, which I claim was excessive for a case of cholera morbus," says R. White, of Coachella, Cal. At the trial he praised medical skill and medicine. For a Hundred Years.
For a hundred years or more Witch Hazel has been recognized as a superior remedy, but it remained for E. C. DeWitt & Co., of Chicago, to discover how to combine the virtues of Witch Hazel with other antiseptics in the form of a salve. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is the best salve in the world for sore cuts, burns, bruises and piles. The high standing of this salve has given rise to counterfeits, and the public is advised to look for the name "DeWitt" on the package, and accept no other. Sold by Woods & Orme, Druggists.

PUBLIC HAS CONTROL.

Fifty years ago great mystery surrounded investments in stocks and bonds. They were regarded by the common people as vague words corresponding to wealth—the property of millionaires—the possession of great capitalists. The man who had a few hundred dollars to spare was barred from an investment in stocks. Corporations were regarded as great aggregations of capital, and the ordinary citizen had no better chance of obtaining a share in them than he had of acquiring a palace in Fifth Avenue, New York city.

Today a great change has taken place. It is the small investors, the men with a few hundred dollars to spare, who now own and control a majority of the corporations in our country. The mining industries are today, with a few exceptions, in the hands of small investors. Corporations have been organized for the benefit of the man of limited means, the par value of stocks being placed at such a small figure that all who wish may join the enterprise. Thus these rich investment fields have been made accessible to the general public.

What has been the result of this? That today the public is beginning to place its money with these corporations as never before in the history of the world; that the mining and other industries are becoming "peopleized"—are spread among a vast number of individuals, who reap the profits therefrom. That the public is beginning to awaken to the great opportunity which this change in laws and conditions has given the small investor. The investing public is now willing and anxious to join in the development of our great natural resources, and it is backing every honest corporation with sufficient capital to make the enterprise successful.—American Adviser.

A Strong Heart.

A strong heart is assured by perfect digestion. Indigestion swells the stomach and puts it out against the heart. This causes shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart and general weakness. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures indigestion, relieves the stomach, takes the strain off the heart and restores it to a full performance of its function naturally. Kodol increases the strength by enabling the stomach and digestive organs to digest, assimilate and appropriate to the blood and tissues all of the food nutriment. Everett Daves, the pleasant mail carrier on rural route No. 2, reported to the Enterprise yesterday what may prove a valuable discovery of mineral near the White Lick in this county on Tradewater; Parson Vaughan and his brother Sam, who reside on the J. W. Harvey place, found a bed of manganese and zinc about eight inches from the surface, and it appears to be in large quantities. The first strata is seven or eight inches in thickness. Deeper in the earth it is found much thicker. Fire clay is also found in abundance.—Enterprise.

INVENTS NEW PROCESS.

J. N. Alsop, of Owensboro, is a Kentuckian who has perfected an invention that promises to revolutionize the industry by which the world is supplied with breadstuffs. By means of the process it is asserted that the best flour can be made from very ordinary wheat. Passing air through bins of flour, after the air has been subjected to the electric flash, is the treatment which it is claimed increases the nutritive qualities of the cereal, and at the same time produces a perfect bleach. The trade journals are full of the patent and mills are being equipped in all parts of the country. The mills on which the invention was tried before the patent was granted say that the treatment devised by Mr. Alsop does all that is claimed for it and greatly enhances the value of their product.

YOUR KIDNEYS ARE THEY WELL?

Unless they are, good health is impossible.

Every drop of blood in the body passes through and is filtered by healthy kidneys every three minutes. Sound kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood, diseased kidneys do not, hence you are sick. FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE makes the kidneys well so they will eliminate the poisons from the blood. It removes the cause of the many diseases resulting from disordered kidneys which have allowed your whole system to become poisoned.

Rheumatism, Bad Blood, Gout, Gravel, Dropsy, Inflammation of the Bladder, Diabetes and Bright's Disease, and many others, are all due to disordered kidneys. A simple test for Kidney disease is to set aside your urine in a bottle or glass for twenty-four hours. If there is a sediment or a cloudy appearance, it indicates that your kidneys are diseased, and unless something is done they become more and more affected until Bright's Disease or Diabetes develops.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is the only preparation which will positively cure all forms of Kidney and Bladder troubles, and cure you permanently. It is a safe remedy and certain in results.

If You are a sufferer, take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once. It will make you well.

Some Pronounced Incurable

Mr. G. A. Stillson, a merchant of Tampico, Ill., writes: "FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE is meeting with wonderful success. It has cured some cases here that physicians pronounced incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. My face today is a living picture of health and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE has made it such."

Had Lumbago and Kidney Trouble

Edward Huss, a well known business man of Salisbury, Mo., writes: "I wish to say for the benefit of others, that I was a sufferer from lumbago and kidney trouble, and all the remedies I took gave me no relief. I began to take FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE, and after the use of three bottles I am cured."

FROM FLORIDA,

L. C. Perry writes an interesting letter from Florida. His wife was Miss Susie James, of this city:

WANCHULA, FLA., May 23, 1904.
—DEAR PRESS: According to promise I will write you a few lines from the "Land of Flowers" down where the orange blossoms grow.

As an introduction I will say Wanchula is a place of some 500 or 600 inhabitants, in Desoto county, 50 miles from Tampa, 100 from Key West, 250 miles south of Jacksonville, and is given up to be the best located of any section in Florida for the raising of vegetables and all citrus fruits.

Wanchula is the largest shipping point on the Atlantic coast line railroad of any other station between Jacksonville and Fort Myers, a distance of 200 miles.

The vegetables raised for shipment are beans, tomatoes, potatoes of both kinds, celery, squashes, egg plant, melons and pineapples. Wanchula hold the prize for shipping the first ear of melons from the south last year.

The climate is all you can wish. The days are no hotter than in Kentucky, but the nights are simply fine, sleeping under cover every night.

Land can be had at almost any price, from $1.25 up to $500 per acre, according to location and improvements.

I purchased ten acres just outside the city limits for $15 per acre, no improvements to speak of. Am having it cleaned up and fenced, ready for a fall crop.

The most profitable in the fruit culture is the orange, cuminquats and grape fruit. Grape fruit will bring in New York $8 per crate. An average tree will net to the owner from $25 to $75 per tree.

There was shipped from Wanchula last season 80,000 crates of fruit and we expect at least 100,000 this year.

So if you will excuse this poor effort to give you an idea of the "Sunny South" I will close by wishing the Press a long and successful career.

Yours truly,

L. C. PERRY.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membrane lining the stomach.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

For Congress,
OLLIE M. JAMES.

The Democratic State Convention met in Louisville at 2 o'clock p. m., today, (Wednesday) and the present outlook is for rather a "hot time." Both Gov. Beckham and those who are opposing him claim the victory in last Saturday's primary. The first, and possibly the decisive test of strength will come with the election of a temporary chairman and consequent organization of the convention. The fight is principally for a successor to Hon Allie W. Young as Chairman of the State Committee, and thereby control of the party machinery of the State. Incidentally one, if not two, United States Senatorships are also involved in the contest. The Beckham forces are supporting Hon Lewis McQuown for State Chairman and the opposing forces have put forward Hon James Kehoe to oppose him. Both are good men, with clean records. The Crittenden delegation goes to the convention uninstructed. Verily, "it is well for brethren to dwell together in unity."

In the county mass conventions held Saturday throughout Kentucky for the selection of delegates to the Democratic State Convention in Louisville Wednesday, the Democrats expressed their unmistakable choice for the Hon. Lewis McQuown, of Bowling Green, whose candidacy for chairman of the State Committee has been championed by Gov. Beckham and the administration forces.

Vote to be Taken.

The board of trustees of the Marion Graded School voted Tuesday night to call an election within this month to vote on the question of an addition to the school buildings—affording a long needed auditorium for commencements, tournaments, etc., and more school rooms to relieve all pressure, for better heating, lighting and sanitation.

The school has added, on an average, 12 families yearly to Marion population, some years many more, with an average attendance of 70 non-resident pupils, bringing their trade and influence to this town. The school has as many as a half dozen occasions annually, called crowds to the city, increasing trade and business in all departments. The moral uplift which the community has received can not be told in dollars.

The motto has always been "no backward step." Let their be no dissenting voice. The climactic idea is no increase in taxes. All can be done without any increase of taxes.

The school is Marion's best advertisement and what a hit it will be to have it heralded over the state that the buildings are now to be increased and enlarged.

$20,000 was asked by some contractor, it will be gotten for $5,000 and by home workmen, we hope.

Silver Anniversary.

Time is Short, Put in Your Guess Quick and Win a Premium.

With last number THE CRITTENDEN PRESS rounded out its 25th year. It starts in to-day with Volume 26, No. 1, with a determination to extend its usefulness to the community it serves and to widen its scope.

The past year has been one of great prosperity for the PRESS. It has increased its paid circulation one every day, until now it stands at the highest mark in its history. We have had the largest receipts in the Job Department during the past month ever known in the Press office since its foundation, and the advertisers of the territory contiguous to Marion have realized its increasing scope, have recognized its influence and have used its columns the past year as never before.

However, this is a world of progress. We are not satisfied to stand still. In celebrating the "Silver Jubilee" of the PRESS, we have decided to double its circulation before the end of next year, and will therefore give the lady or gentleman, girl or boy who gets up a club of 100 yearly subscribers a handsome gold filled watch, warranted for twenty years, and also chain to match. Watches can be seen at Press office.

The party who gets up the greatest number over 100 before July 4th, will also receive a handsome gold watch, so if you win the first prize, why not try also for the second prize and give it to your sweet heart. There is only one restriction, and that is out of every one hundred, ten must be new subscribers. Every subscriber paying $1.00 will have ten votes for the most popular girl now residing in Crittenden or any adjoining county where the Press goes into the household. Every subscriber will have the right to vote for whom he pleases, provided the lady lives in Crittenden or one of the adjoining counties and reads THE CRITTENDEN PRESS.

Each subscriber paying a year's subscription will have 10 guesses on the number of instructed votes received by the "winners" in each of the National conventions. You can put in 5 guesses on the Democratic and 5 on the Republican. The Democratic National Convention meets in St. Louis July 4th. No matter who the winner is, the question is how many instructed or uninstructed votes will he get in that convention.

The Republican National Convention meets in Chicago, June 20th. No matter who the winner is, the question is how many votes will he get in that convention.

To the man, woman, girl or boy who names the correct or nearest correct number for either candidate will give a handsome gold filled watch with gold chain attached.

Send in your guesses!

THE NEST IN THE OLD HAT.

Once an old hat was left in the grape arbor and a little wren saw it and she thought that it would be a nice place to build her home.

So she went to work gathering little bits of wool, horse-hairs and a lot of sticks for her warm house.

It did not take the mother wren very long to build her home, but when it was completed she laid three little speckled eggs not much larger than small peas. Then she set upon them for about a week, and some little children went to the arbor and saw the little nest and the old bird was on the edge of the old hat. The children were named Edwin, Ruth and Emma.

Edwin was the first to see it and he said: "Look here girls, if this isn't a little wren's nest in father's old hat."

The little wren chirped as if to say, "Do not bother my pretty home, little children."

The children said: "We will not harm you, little mother, but if the old cat finds you, she will not leave anything of you but your feathers."

"But I will fasten her up in the cellar where she cannot get out," said Edwin. When he went to the house he called the old cat to the cellar with a saucer of milk, where he fastened her up.

The next time that the children went to the arbor the eggs had hatched and 1, 2, 3 little baby birdies were in the nest instead of the three little eggs. The mother had gone to hunt some bugs and worms for her young ones.

Every day the children brought crumbs and scattered them on the floor where the old bird could get them. When they had scattered the crumbs they would hide behind the bushes and watch the bird feed them to her little children. The old cat had been in the cellar for a few days, and one fine day in June the birds were large enough to fly and Edwin let the old cat out of the cellar, for she did not like to stay shut when the days were so fine.

The little wren was very glad that these children had been so kind to her as to fasten the cat up and save a fond mother and her family. I guess what made these children so kind to her, they thought how sorry they would be if someone were to come and take their mother away, that loved them so much, for love is all just the same for the birds as it is for people, I think. Don't you think so?

QUESTION FOR THIS WEEK.

How many times does the word "Lord" appear in the bible?

THE LITTLE SCHOLAR'S CHOICE.

"Though I were sleepy as a cat,"
The little scholar said,
"I would not care to take a nap
In any river's bed."

"And though I were so starved I scarce
Had strength to stand,
I'd beg through all the valley ere
I sought a table land."

"But, oh! what jolly times I'd have!
I'd play and never stop,
If I could only take a string
And spin a mountain top."

FARMER BOY AN INVENTOR.

Willie M. Lynn, a 19-year-old farm lad living with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Lynn, eight miles west of Eldora, Ia., has recently invented a traction gasoline engine which has attracted the attention of a great many practical machinists who pronounce it a marvel.

The lad has always taken an interest in machinery and electricity, and his parents have encouraged him. The engine was manufactured on the farm by the boy and is constructed of bits of old iron, brass, wire and other castaway material found in the average farmer's barnyard. It is of about four-horse power, will attain quite a speed and is powerful enough to furnish the motive power for sawing all the family wood and turn the large power churn, and might be used to run a threshing machine.

Young Lynn has also taken a great deal of interest in electricity and has invented an arrangement whereby a bell rings at the house when the mailman puts mail matter in the free rural delivery box at the roadside. The house is lighted by electricity which is generated by the boy, and he is now perfecting a delicate motor which will run his mother's sewing machine, churn the butter and run the separator. The young man will soon leave the farm and take up practical work in one of the largest electric light plants in Iowa.

BREAD AND BUTTER.

BY O. G. W.

My mother says, if little girls
Want curly hair, they must
Eat all their bread and butter up,
And specially the crust.

So very many little girls
In all the wide, wide world
Would be so very happy if
Their hair was only curled!

And can I be so selfish then?
No, dear mamma, I must
Give other little girls my bread,
And specially the crust.

EXHIBITIONS.

When Susie spoke her little piece
On exhibition day,
In the old schoolhouse bleak and brown
That looks down Warsaw way;
In pinafore and dangling braids
She seemed a vision sweet;
For me to worship where I sat
And shuffled in my seat.

When Susie spoke her little piece
All red and pale grew she,
With bashful air and shifting glance
That saw no soul but me.
Although no word I understood,
So low her lipsing were,
I gloried in the thought that I
Whore audience was to her.

When Susie spoke her little piece—
But that was years ago.
We're married now, and still am I
Her audience I throw.
Now when she speaks her little piece
Her voice rings clear and loud:
I'd rather be a boy again
And share it with a crowd.

A Doctor's Device

(Original.)

In the days of the Pennsylvania oil strikes I, then a young physician, was called to examine a man there, Samuel Granger, who had inherited a farm near which oil had been struck and whose brain was supposed to have been affected by the sudden turn of his fortune. He heard sounds no one else could hear, and at intervals a ghost came into his room at night. He lived with his aunt, who wanted to have him placed in an asylum.

I didn't care to have the patient or his aunt know that I was going to examine him, so I wrote that I would arrive much later than I intended. One morning I went to the house without either the aunt or nephew knowing that I was coming. The door was opened by the aunt.

"I understand," I said, "that this property is for sale. I would like to buy it if I can do so at a fair price and get a clear title."

"You can't buy it or get a clear title either. My nephew owns it, and he's gone daft on account of its sudden rise in value."

"Why don't you have him adjudged incompetent to manage his affairs and a guardian appointed?"

"That's what we're trying to do. There's a doctor coming down from the city in a few days to examine him. But I don't believe it'll do any good. Sam sees a ghost every now and then. Those isn't any ghost. Nobody but Sam sees it. He's all right on other subjects, and I don't know as you can call a man crazy because he says he has seen a spirit."

"Has any one been with him when he has seen the ghost?"

"Don't know that there has, excepting me."

"How often does the ghost appear?"

"Oh, once in awhile."

"Will he be likely to see it within the next few days?"

"Maybe, if he gets excited about anything."

"I'll tell you what I'd do if I were you. I'd tell him that the doctor is coming to examine him with a view to putting him in an asylum. Tell it to him the day before you expect the doctor. That will bring on the paroxysm, and he'll fancy he's seen the ghost again. That'll give the doctor an opportunity to talk with him just after he has seen it."

The woman made no reply to this, and, assuring her that I would give a large sum for the property as soon as it could be sold, I left her.

The next day but one I was expected to appear and examine the patient. The next afternoon I went up on a hill overlooking Sam Granger's farm and watched. All I saw was a young man come to a window but a few feet above the roof of a piazza. After dark I stole down to the house and climbed up a trellis to the window. It was summer, and the window was open. There was no one in the room, but a light on a table showed me by the presence of clothing, pipes, tobacco and such things scattered about that it was a man's room. I waited on the piazza roof till after 9 o'clock, when the young man entered, took off his clothes and went to bed. He looked nervous and haggard.

What I was after was to see him under the influence of his vision without his knowing of my presence. His aunt had doubtless excited him by telling him that I was coming, and he would be pretty sure to see the ghost. I could hear him tossing in the bed, but as the lamp was not lighted I could not see him. I waited till nearly 11 o'clock, when he had quieted down, and I thought he was asleep. But suddenly he gave a shriek, and I could faintly see him sitting up in bed, doubtless staring at his vision. I cast my eyes about the room, and to the left, near a door, I saw a luminous white figure, apparently of a woman.

For a moment I was taken aback. I had no idea of anything appearing except to the young man's excited brain. Here was something that I could see myself. Then it occurred to me that the ghost's garments had been rubbed with phosphorus. The figure stood a few moments and was turning to go before I gathered my faculties, but suddenly under an impulse I sprang into the window, dashed across the room and seized its skirts just as it had got into the hall. Then with one arm around a boxwood waist I drew the apparition back into the room, took out my matchbox and lit the lamp. My next move was to pull a piece of white muslin from the apparition and expose the head and shoulders of the aunt.

"Who are you?" she cried angrily. "I'm the man that wants to buy this farm, alias the doctor who was to come here to examine your nephew. He doesn't need any examination. It is plain that you are anxious to shut him up, doubtless with a view to being appointed his guardian and getting a hand on his property."

The young man was astonished that his ghost was human and at the same time shocked at what his aunt had been doing. Then he fell into a rage with her and despite my efforts to prevent drove her out of the house.

When I returned to the city and related my experience to some of my young medical associates they all declared that I had mistaken my calling; I should have been a detective. To this I replied that I had been especially stupid from a detective point of view, as I had not for a moment suspected the real cause of Sam Granger's mental trouble.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

A Candidate For Vice President.
Senator Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana, who is spoken of as likely to receive the nomination of the Republican party for vice president, took his seat in the United States senate, his first public office, March 4, 1897, succeeding Daniel W. Voorhees, Democrat.

Senator Fairbanks was born in Union county, O., May 11, 1852, and is therefore in his fifty-second year. After passing through the common schools of the neighborhood he attended the Ohio Wesleyan university, Delaware, from which he graduated in 1872. He was admitted to the bar in 1874 and removed the same year to Indianapolis. He became prominent in state politics in 1892, being chairman of the Republican state convention of that year. In 1893 he received the entire party vote in the legislature for United States senator, but was defeated by David Turpie, Democrat. Senator Fairbanks was temporary chairman of the Republican national convention at St. Louis in 1896. He was chairman of the committee on platform and resolutions at the convention of 1900, which met in Philadelphia. He is serving his second term in the United States senate, having been re-elected in 1903.

The Landis Trio.

There are three Landis brothers, familiar to Washington—Charles, who is the eldest; Fred, who is almost the baby member of the house, and Kenesaw, who used to be private secretary to Gresham when the latter was secretary of state. They are all of a kidney—bright, witty and unconventional. All of them betray the flavor of the western soil in which they grew. Charles and Fred are newspaper men. Kenesaw is a lawyer in Chicago, whither he went from the state department. Kenesaw was the first to introduce the family to Washington, and there are few people who had anything to do with the second Cleveland administration who will ever forget him. It seemed a mockery that such a breezy smasher of precedents should be attached to the "foreign office," as the state department was called in those days.

The Vindication of Dreyfus.

The signs are that Alfred Dreyfus, who when captain of artillery in the French army and attached to the war office was charged with supplying certain secret information to the German government, is soon to be entirely vindicated. It will be remembered that Captain Dreyfus was dismissed in disgrace from the service and after a secret military trial at the Cherche Midl prison was banished to Devil's Island in 1894. In 1896 public sympathy was aroused for Dreyfus by disclosures which were made showing that he was the innocent victim of a plot, the outgrowth of the anti-Semitic feeling in the army. In 1898 Dreyfus was brought back from Devil's Island and given another trial at Rennes, where after many sensational features, including an attempt to assassinate Maitre Labori, chief counsel for Dreyfus, a verdict of "guilty" with extenuating circumstances was returned. The sentence was ten years' imprisonment, but Dreyfus was almost immediately pardoned by President Loubet.

The criminal branch of the court of cassation in Paris has ordered a new trial in compliance with a motion made by counsel for Dreyfus. At the beginning of this latest proceeding in the celebrated case the attorney general informed the court that the charges against Dreyfus were found upon investigation, in the light of later information, to be "miserable" and without foundation, and "valuable only because of the mystery cleverly thrown about them."

CIVIC PATRIOTISM.

The President of Princeton Says It Begins at Home.

The citizens of Passaic, N. J., to revivify civic spirit and to develop a new civic enthusiasm, recently gave a big dinner to themselves, at which President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton university was the principal guest and chief speaker. Dr. Wilson's subject was "Civic Patriotism," and he spoke in part as follows:

"We cannot usefully and practically love the United States until first we love the place in which we have our own rooting."

"Each community is either self-governed or self-demoralized, self-disciplined. Dr. Toqueville even in his simpler day saw that institutions free as ours and yet complex and difficult required extraordinary variety of information and excellence of discretion on the part of the people; that it presupposed information and capacity of quite unprecedented compass and flexibility. Every man among us, therefore, is put upon his honor to understand and serve the community in which he lives, and the only true patriotism is that which is local in its rootage. Vital patriotism begins at home; it is not a vague interest spread over the whole affairs of a whole nation, but a direct and definite identification of feeling and purpose with the interests of one's home and neighbors."

"It would be natural to ask whether it were possible to breed a motive which shall control the conduct—that is, whether one can deliberately cultivate patriotism. It is clear that it is quite possible to do so. Motive is the child of interest, and it is perfectly possible to cultivate an interest, an interest in your own affairs which will breed a selfish motive or an interest in the affairs of your community which will breed an unselfish motive, and the conditions under which this can be done are worth understanding. You cannot touch the life of a nation directly; you must touch and move it indirectly by thought and motive where you are. You can deliberately acquaint yourself with the conditions existing around you, and you can embark, if you will, upon every local enterprise that promises betterment."

"This community will never awake to its own betterment and best development through any abstract motive of duty, but only through a concrete image of its own life and interests, through a sort of ardent and enduring self-consciousness. You will find that there is mixed with all patriotic motives a certain pride in the past of the community, a consciousness of what it has been and is and a desire for its distinction as a whole. The revival of historical study in our day in respect of the history of localities, particularly of neighborhoods, of countryside, is full of hope for the creation of the better sort of local self-consciousness and ambition."

"Distrust the patriotism of a man who is always spending his feeling upon some distant object, whose energy does not seek the nearest duty, but the more remote. Every citizen who is thoughtful of the welfare of his country should seek to see and understand his nearest duty and to do it with all thoughtfulness and yet without impatience."

The Laundry at Home.

Fill the boiler two-thirds full of soft water, then in a basin shave up a bar of good soap and add one-half cupful of coal oil. Pour about a quart of boiling water over this and stir to dissolve. When dissolved put half or a trifle more of suds into the boiler. Now, after having sorted the clothes, put the sheets, pillowcases, hand towels and napkins into the boiler—as many as can be stirred easily. Keep the clothes boiling for twenty or thirty minutes, stirring often—the more stirring the better. Then lift them into a tub with the clothes stick and put more suds into the boiler; also more clothes. Pour cold water on the boiled clothes, so that they can be handled, and rinse. The clothes that were the least soiled will need absolutely no rubbing. The next bollierful now being ready, proceed as before, looking at each piece to see that it is clean. Should any dirt remain rub lightly and the dirt will "fall out." Boil all light colored clothes, and even the gray and blue calicoes—anything that does not fade.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Suggestions on Plumbing.

It should be remembered that good or bad plumbing does not always depend upon the polish of the faucets or even upon the matter of being open or closed. The many classes now formed in any city where domestic science institutes exist to instruct housekeepers in the fundamental points of this important branch of home economics indicate a growing appreciation of the value of such instruction. Every housekeeper can learn that safe plumbing means properly constructed traps in good working order and kept in perfect condition; that the icebox must not drain into the waste pipe; that leaking gas fixtures mean neuralgia and neuritis, and numerous other useful and available facts.—Exchange.

The Mechanical Flour Sifter.

A busy housewife appreciates every little contrivance that helps to do her work quicker, while it does not detract from the thoroughness with which it would have been done had the ordinary means of performing the task been employed.

This fact makes even such a simple thing as a flour sifter an object of interest when it presents features which add to the efficiency of the user in the performance of one of the most important little duties of the kitchen—the making of the bread. The illustration shows the operation of a new contrivance. Ordinarily the flour is poured into the sifter, which is held in one hand, while a crank is turned with the other hand, rotating a ring within the sifter that loosens and breaks up the flour and precipitates it to the sifting screen. With the new sifter the ring operating mechanism is attached to the handle, and the inventor claims that the whole operation can be performed with one hand of the bread-maker.

A Useful Sewing Screen.

A useful device has been invented by a woman who lives in cramped apartment quarters. It is a sewing screen, the front of which is ornamental and the back of which has pockets fitted up with everything used in doing the family sewing. The screen is set in front of the machine when in use, and when not needed it is folded together and put away in a closet.

The pockets on the back are made of denim or some strong material and have a casing at the top in which elastic is run, so that they are kept tight and snug.

Use For an Old Carpet.

An economical suggestion for the housewife is to take any old carpet which is whole, but too discolored and shabby for use, and tack it down smoothly on the floor. Make a thick starch of flour and water. Put a coat of this on with a large brush. When dry give it a coat of paint any color desired, though red is preferable. Then give a second coat, and you have a cheap floor covering fully as good as linoleum and not half as expensive. By painting once a year it will last a number of years.

Collodion For Burns.

While ordinary sweet oil mixed with turpentine is excellent for burns, it is well to keep a bottle of collodion at hand. This seems to relieve the small burns which make a child and even an adult so very nervous more quickly than anything else. Relief is the important thing for these small burns, and the collodion forms a coating over the skin which effectually shuts out all air. Keep the collodion in a dark blue bottle away from the light and well corked with a rubber stopper.

STREETS OF A TOWN.

When Clean and Well Paved They Are a Splendid Advertisement.

Poor streets will do for a dead community, but no town that has any enterprise about it will neglect its streets. Good pavements, of course, cost money, but they are a splendid investment in the end, as has been proved in hundreds of towns in the land. A town well paved becomes clean and beautiful, and the value of property is immensely enhanced.

Secure good streets and then keep them clean. Much of the dirtiness of the streets could be prevented if the citizens would be a little more careful. A greater use of ash barrels or rubbish cans would keep from the streets a large portion of the litter that now disfigures them.

Nothing gives more agreeable first impressions of a city or town than the cleanliness of its streets, stores and public places, and it may draw to them many inhabitants and large investments.

It doesn't cost much and is very little trouble to keep a town clean if the citizens will co-operate and do their share in the matter, and there is no better advertisement for a town. Home seekers will go to a clean town just as one will go to a clean store to buy his goods.

Poor streets discourage those who would improve and beautify their premises, while clean, well paved streets force many improvements, and there is a general fixing up of residence frontings.

A Pointer For Backward Towns.

"I am dealing in real estate all over Pennsylvania," said a Pittsburg man, "and thus I have a fair chance of knowing how most of the towns are getting on. Give me a house and lot to sell in a village where things are kept trim and neat and where the people have public pride and are always to the front, and I am sure of making a cash sale without delay. On the contrary, ask me to sell property in a village where the principal attractions are mudholes and tumbledown buildings, and I may carry it on my books for three or four years and never get an offer. I know some towns where real estate is just as salable for cash as if in the heart of New York city, but in others the owner of $3,000 worth of real estate couldn't borrow $750 on it at even 10 per cent interest. A town either goes ahead or begins to go backward, and once it gets the name of being a dead and alive place it will require the biggest sort of an effort to restore its lost reputation."

The Honest Man.

"Is it true?" asked the interloper, "that when you first came to this country you worked in your shirt sleeves for a living?"

"It is not," replied the successful public man indignantly.

"Ah! No offense—I hope—"

"When I came here," continued the successful man, "I didn't have a shirt."

The Real Difficulty.

Mrs. Henpeck—The trouble with you is that you are a confirmed dyspeptic. Mr. Henpeck—No, my dear. That's not correct. The trouble with me is that I am a contradicted dyspeptic.

A life saved by FOERG'S REMEDY the great blood purifier

Read this grateful letter from a prominent Kentuckian

Princeton, Ky., Feb. 4th, 1903.
I wish to state for the Foerg Remedy Co. of Evansville, Ind., that I believe their great Remedy saved my brother's life some ten years ago. He was troubled with a blood disease, and I could get no relief until he took Foerg's Remedy, which he manufactured by this company. After taking five bottles he was entirely relieved of his trouble, and when he died some years ago he was entirely well of that disease. I also took two bottles as a blood purifier and was much benefited.

Many do not become interested in these matters until failing health or a distressing eruption of the skin reminds them sharply of their ignorance. Is it any wonder then that so many become the easy prey of vain promises both inside and outside the medical community, and too often find a tragically empty grave, where a little common sense knowledge would have shown them the signs of recovery and inspired their lives. Know thyself!

A Doctor's Device

(Original.)

In the days of the Pennsylvania oil strikes I, then a young physician, was called to examine a man there, Samuel Granger, who had inherited a farm near which oil had been struck and whose brain was supposed to have been affected by the sudden turn of his fortune. He heard sounds no one else could hear, and at intervals a ghost came into his room at night. He lived with his aunt, who wanted to have him placed in an asylum.

I didn't care to have the patient or his aunt know that I was going to examine him, so I wrote that I would arrive much later than I intended. One morning I went to the house without either the aunt or nephew knowing that I was coming. The door was opened by the aunt.

"I understand," I said, "that this property is for sale. I would like to buy it if I can do so at a fair price and get a clear title."

"You can't buy it or get a clear title either. My nephew owns it, and he's gone daft on account of its sudden rise in value."

"Why don't you have him adjudged incompetent to manage his affairs and a guardian appointed?"

"That's what we're trying to do. There's a doctor coming down from the city in a few days to examine him. But I don't believe it'll do any good. Sam sees a ghost every now and then. These isn't any ghost. Nobody but Sam sees it. He's all right on other subjects, and I don't know as you can call a man crazy because he says he has seen a spirit."

"Has any one been with him when he has seen the ghost?"

"Don't know that there has, excepting me."

"How often does the ghost appear?"

"Oh, once in awhile."

"Will he be likely to see it within the next few days?"

"Maybe, if he gets excited about anything."

"I'll tell you what I'd do if I were you. I'd tell him that the doctor is coming to examine him with a view to putting him in an asylum. Tell it to him the day before you expect the doctor. That will bring on the paroxysm, and he'll fancy he's seen the ghost again. That'll give the doctor an opportunity to talk with him just after he has seen it."

The woman made no reply to this, and, assuring her that I would give a large sum for the property as soon as it could be sold, I left her.

The next day but one I was expected to appear and examine the patient. The next afternoon I went up on a hill overlooking Sam Granger's farm and watched. All I saw was a young man come to a window but a few feet above the roof of a piazza. After dark I stole down to the house and climbed up a trellis to the window. It was summer, and the window was open. There was no one in the room, but a light on a table showed me by the presence of clothing, pipes, tobacco and such things scattered about that it was a man's room. I waited on the piazza roof till about 9 o'clock, when the young man entered, took off his clothes and went to bed. He looked nervous and haggard.

What I was after was to see him under the influence of his vision without his knowledge of my presence. His aunt had doubtless excited him by telling him that I was coming, and he would be pretty sure to see the ghost. I could hear him tossing in the bed, but as the lamp was not lighted I could not see him. I waited till nearly 11 o'clock, when he had quieted down, and I thought he was asleep. But suddenly he gave a shriek, and I could faintly see him sitting up in bed, doubtless staring at his vision. I cast my eyes about the room, and to the left, near a door, I saw a luminous white figure, apparently of a woman.

For a moment I was taken aback. I had no idea of anything appearing except to the young man's excited brain. Here was something that I could see myself. Then it occurred to me that the ghost's garments had been rubbed with phosphorus. The figure stood a few moments and was turning to go before I gathered my faculties, but suddenly under an impulse I sprang into the window, dashed across the room and seized its skirts just as it had got into the hall. Then with one arm around a boxwood waist I drew the apparition back into the room, took out my matchbox and lit the lamp. My next move was to pull a piece of white muslin from the apparition and expose the head and shoulders of the aunt.

"Who are you?" she cried angrily.

"I'm the man that wants to buy this farm, alias the doctor who was to come here to examine your nephew. He doesn't need any examination. It is plain that you are anxious to shut him up, doubtless with a view to being appointed his guardian and getting a hand on his property."

The young man was astonished that his ghost was human and at the same time shocked at what his aunt had been doing. Then he fell into a rage with her and despite my efforts to prevent drove her out of the house.

When I returned to the city and related my experience to some of my young medical associates they all declared that I had mistaken my calling; I should have been a detective. To this I replied that I had been especially stupid from a detective point of view, as I had not for a moment suspected the real cause of Sam Granger's mental trouble.

Secure good streets and then keep them clean. Much of the dirtiness of the streets could be prevented if the citizens would be a little more careful. A greater use of ash barrels or rubbish cans would keep from the streets a large portion of the litter that now disfigures them.

Nothing gives more agreeable first impressions of a city or town than the cleanliness of its streets, stores and public places, and it may draw to them many inhabitants and large investments.

It doesn't cost much and is very little trouble to keep a town clean if the citizens will co-operate and do their share in the matter, and there is no better advertisement for a town. Home seekers will go to a clean town just as one will go to a clean store to buy his goods.

Poor streets discourage those who would improve and beautify their premises, while clean, well paved streets force many improvements, and there is a general fixing up of residence frontings.

A Pointer For Backward Towns.

"I am dealing in real estate all over Pennsylvania," said a Pittsburg man, "and thus I have a fair chance of knowing how most of the towns are getting on. Give me a house and lot to sell in a village where things are kept trim and neat and where the people have public pride and are always to the front, and I am sure of making a cash sale without delay. On the contrary, ask me to sell property in a village where the principal attractions are mudholes and tumbledown buildings, and I may carry it on my books for three or four years and never get an offer. I know some towns where real estate is just as salable for cash as if in the heart of New York city, but in others the owner of $3,000 worth of real estate couldn't borrow $750 on it at even 10 per cent interest. A town either goes ahead or begins to go backward, and once it gets the name of being a dead and alive place it will require the biggest sort of an effort to restore its lost reputation."

The Honest Man.

"Is it true," asked the interviewer, "that when you first came to this country you worked in your shirt sleeves for a living?"

"It is not," replied the successful public man indignantly.

"Ah! No offense—I hope—"

"When I came here," continued the successful man, "I didn't have a shirt!"—Cincinnati Times-Star.

The Real Difficulty.

Mrs. Henpeck—The trouble with you is that you are a confirmed dyspeptic. Mr. Henpeck No, my dear. That's not correct. The trouble with me is that I am a contradicted dyspeptic.

A life saved by FOERG'S REMEDY the great blood purifier

Read this grateful letter from a prominent Kentuckian

Princeton, Ky., Feb. 14, 1903.
I wish to state for the Foerg Remedy Co. of Evansville, Ind., that I believe their great Remedy has saved my life. I was afflicted with blood disease, and I could get no relief until I took it. After taking five bottles I was cured. I also took two bottles as a blood purifier and was much benefited. (Signed) C. H. LEWIS, Princeton, Ky.

People do not become interested in these things until failing health or a distressing outbreak of the skin reminds them sharply of their ignorance. Is it any wonder then that so many become the easy prey of quack remedies, and outside the medical fraternity, and too often find a tragically early grave, where a little common sense knowledge would have shown them the means of recovery and spared their lives. Know thyself!

AND HERE'S THE REMEDY
Foreswarned is forewarned—let this warning sink deep in—obtain from us or from your druggist a trial quantity of the Remedy—test its efficiency the first time you have the opportunity, so that you may know for yourself and become an enthusiastic convert to the virtue and strength of our marvelous blood remedy—from then on you will refuse to be without it and your cure is effected. Why take chances? Why procrastinate a single day? Act now. Price $1.00 per bottle, six bottles for $5.00

THE TREASURE OF A WRECK

[Copyright, 1904, by C. B. Lewis.]

In the year 1802, while serving on board a man-of-war in the Federal navy, I had a chum named Adams, who had been a sailor. He was killed a year later, but meanwhile had told me a strange story of a treasure wreck on Kerguelen Island. After his death and the end of the war I verified his story in part, and that brought about the organization of a treasure company. This company was composed of six men, all of whom had served in the navy, and our capital was the pay and prize money due us at the close of the war.

We bought from the government the bark Racer, which was captured off Wilmington in the last days of the blockade runners, and she was fitted out for the voyage at Charleston. We engaged twelve negro sailors for the voyage, making, with the officers, cook and steward, twenty men. We took on board shovels, picks, axes, jack-saws, powder and fuse and what-ever we might need in cleaning out a hulk, together with lumber to build us a house ashore, and we cleared for Sydney at the custom house. The six of us had put in every dollar we could raise, and there was just $130 in the common purse when we sailed away. All of us believed in the treasure, however, and the craft was well supplied with provisions.

It was a long voyage, without incident to interest. Our first and only stop was at the Cape for fresh water. One day, months after leaving Charleston, the island of Kerguelen rose up out of the sea before us. We gave three cheers and brought up in a sheltered bay on the north side and soon had a boat in the water to go ashore.

Right there on the beach before our eyes was the treasure wreck Adams had told me of years before. The sight of that battered hull, gray and weather-beaten and rotting away, was like coming upon the skeleton of a human being on the great plains. We stood contemplating it for a few minutes and then clambered aboard. The birds were thick about, but not another living thing had visited that shore since Adams paddled away from it on a raft to be picked up 200 miles away. She lay fifty feet above high tide, and we could walk all around her dry shod.

We spent the first day in a cursory examination of the wreck and the island, and on the next we built a shanty with our lumber and unloaded our tools and provisions. On the third day we chopped out her decks above the treasure room and reached the strong-hold.

There were no less than six iron-bound boxes and a big steel safe. We got at the safe first. When it had been hoisted on deck and lowered over the side, it was blown open with powder, and we found $300,000 in English gold and notes. There was jewelry to the amount of about $100,000, and this was ticketed with the names of various passengers. In the six boxes, which were all private property, we found about $20,000 in cash and various pieces of jewelry and many papers. Among the latter were deeds of real estate in Australia and England and two commissions belonging to army officers. As fast as we came to private property it was reticketed and laid aside with a view of restoring it to owners or relatives.

Adams had told me that the ship was foundering when driven ashore in a terrible gale, but when we came to get into the hold we found that very little of the cargo had been damaged. We got out thousands of pounds of wool in good condition, together with sufficient tallow, hides and wines to give our craft a fair cargo.

We began finding skeletons as soon as we began work, and from first to last we buried the bones of at least fifty unfortunate passengers, many of them women and children. We found them mostly in the main cabin and the staterooms, and some of the skeletons were buried under four or five feet of hard sand.

We did not find our treasure and get the cargo out of the hulk in a week or a month. On the contrary, we were on the island sixteen full weeks and working hard every day, and when we at last finished our work the wreck was blown up, and the next high tide carried all that was left of her out to sea. She had rested there in the sands of that lonely shore for twenty-one years, and yet only one man knew of the treasure in her bowels.

When our work was quite finished we sailed away, laying our course for the Cape of Good Hope. The six of us were rich men now, but I do not remember that there was much rejoicing over the fact. The lonely situation of Kerguelen and the finding of the skeletons had quite taken our enthusiasm away. After a prosperous voyage we finally reached the cape and anchored to take on supplies. None of the sailors was permitted to go ashore. We meant to run the craft straight to New York without another stop. I took the sum of $2,000 and went ashore to buy and send down the supplies, and I was then to take a steamer for America and reach there first and make arrangements for the reception of the treasure and cargo.

Two days later I stood on the shore and saw our bark sail away with a fair wind. She was spoken two days later, but that was the end. From that day on she has never been heard of. The blacks knew of the treasure, of course, and they may have mutilated and taken possession. The bark may have foundered or burned or been driven ashore on the African coast. It is thirty-five years since she sailed away from the cape, and no man can more than guess her fate.

The Jewel I Found

[Original.]

When I was at an age to begin the world for myself, my sole desire was to get rich quick and spend my money all on myself. With this in view I went to Port Natal to hunt for diamonds. I hunted three years, with no success. Then it began to dawn on me that instead of winning a life of ease I had won not only a life of poverty, but one of exile.

One day when riding my bicycle along a newly made road my saddle slipped forward, and not having a wrench with which to tighten the nut I dismounted to find a stone to drive the saddle forward. While looking for a stone of the proper size my eye fell on one about as large as a small hen's egg, which my practiced eye at once took for a diamond. I hurried to my room with it, tested it and found it to be a diamond of the first water. In a twinkling all was changed. My dream was realized.

I had a small stone which I sold for enough to take me home and at once sailed for America. The first day out on the ocean I did nothing but dream of my good fortune. I would build me a country house on the seashore where I was born and sit all the long summer day on my piazza looking at the ocean. The second day I tired of dreaming and began to long for something to occupy me. On the third I felt bored. One morning I noticed a young girl sitting in a steamer chair. It was her first appearance on deck. At any rate I had not seen her before. I wished at once I could know and talk with her. It would relieve that bored feeling which had come upon me. Luckily I had made the acquaintance of one who knew her and secured an introduction. She had gone to South Africa to teach, but her health had become impaired, and she was going back to where she had started from, worse off than before.

I spent hours with her. I told her that I was sufficiently well off to do as I liked, and what I liked to do was nothing. She did not seem very enthusiastic over my plans for the future. Indeed she said that a man without an object was a lumberer of the ground. I could not but contrast myself with this girl, who in face of real discouragements was so much more ready to exert herself than I, with health, strength and man's advantages in fighting the world.

One night, or, rather, early morning, I was playing cards and drinking with some men in the smoking room. There was a dense fog on the water, and we should have slowed down, but instead of doing so kept up an average speed. Suddenly there was a clang at the engine bell, a stoppage of the machinery and a commotion on deck, then a crash forward, and we knew there had been a collision.

Amid a panic and a scramble for the boats I saw my girl friend. She was standing on an upper deck, looking down upon the turmoil with remarkable calmness. Some of the sailors had seized a boat—for all discipline had vanished—and were just cutting loose. It was the last of the boats, the others having gone. Tearing my diamond from my undershirt, in which it was sewed, I held it before the eyes of the man casting off.

"Do you see that? It's a diamond worth a big fortune. I'll give it to you if you'll take that girl up there with you."

He cast a glance at her and said quickly, "Her, not you; only room for one."

Dashing away, I seized her, carried her to the boat, put her in, gave the man my diamond, and she drifted away from me, her eyes fixed on mine in indescribable gratitude till she was lost to sight.

I was one of three men—the survivors of ten—who were picked up on a raft and taken to New York. The newspapers were full of the loss of our ship, the boat in which I had placed my girl friend having been picked up and brought into port a few days before. We of the raft and those in this boat were the only ones saved from the sunken steamer. I noted the address of the girl I had been the means of saving and went to see her.

All she knew was that I had induced a seaman to take her into the boat. That I had bribed him with a fortune she was ignorant. I did not tell her. She was full of gratitude, and I did not care to add to her sense of obligation by telling her that on her account I had put myself back where I was when I started for Port Natal.

We had both gone to the same land, I to acquire wealth to enable me to live in ease, she to make herself useful in a life of ceaseless labor. I had succeeded and given my success that she might not die; she had failed and returned to her home in disappointment. I was still on the threshold of life, with health and strength; she an invalid without the means of gaining a livelihood.

But I had received an all-absorbing motive. My whole being was bent on expending my man's strength for this helpless girl. This I told her, and she accepted what I could hardly convince her was not a sacrifice.

That was many years ago. Every successive year I have resolved to tell her of the fortune I paid for her, and every year I have broken my resolution. Now I doubt if I shall ever tell her. It would, with her, destroy the equilibrium existing between us. She is content at knowing that she furnished the spur that made a man of me, gave me a modest house over my head and what I need for the wants of myself and my family. While the price I paid was not too much for such a reformation, I could never make her believe that there are not times when I long for my diamond and the ease it would have brought me.

None of the sailors was permitted to go ashore. We meant to run the craft straight to New York without another stop. I took the sum of $2,000 and went ashore to buy and send down the supplies, and I was then to take a steamer for America and reach there first and make arrangements for the reception of the treasure and cargo.

Two days later I stood on the shore and saw our bark sail away with a fair wind. She was spoken two days later, but that was the end. From that day on she has never been heard of. The blacks knew of the treasure, of course, and they may have mutilated and taken possession. The bark may have foundered or burned or been driven ashore on the African coast. It is thirty-five years since she sailed away from the cape, and no man can more than guess her fate.

The Jewel I Found

(Original.)
When I was at an age to begin the world for myself, my sole desire was to get rich quick and spend my money all on myself. With this in view I went to Port Natal to hunt for diamonds. I hunted three years, with no success. Then it began to dawn on me that instead of winning a life of ease I had won not only a life of poverty, but one of exile.

One day when riding my bicycle along a newly made road my saddle slipped forward, and not having a wrench with which to tighten the nut I dismounted to find a stone to drive the saddle forward. While looking for a stone of the proper size my eye fell on one about as large as a small hen's egg, which my practiced eye at once took for a diamond. I hurried to my room with it, tested it and found it to be a diamond of the first water. In a twinkling all was changed. My dream was realized.

I had a small stone which I sold for enough to take me home and at once sailed for America. The first day out on the ocean I did nothing but dream of my good fortune. I would build me a country house on the seashore where I was born and sit all the long summer days on my piazza looking at the ocean. The second day I tired of dreaming and began to long for something to occupy me. On the third I felt bored. One morning I noticed a young girl sitting in a steamer chair. It was her first appearance on deck. At any rate I had not seen her before. I wished at once I could know and talk with her. It would relieve that bored feeling which had come upon me. Luckily I had made the acquaintance of one who knew her and secured an introduction. She had gone to South Africa to teach, but her health had become impaired, and she was going back to where she had started from, worse off than before.

I spent hours with her. I told her that I was sufficiently well off to do as I liked, and what I liked to do was nothing. She did not seem very enthusiastic over my plans for the future. Indeed she said that a man without an object was a lumberer of the ground. I could not but contrast myself with this girl, who in face of real discouragements was so much more ready to exert herself than I, with health, strength and man's advantages in fighting the world.

One night, or, rather, early morning, I was playing cards and drinking with some men in the smoking room. There was a dense fog on the water, and we should have slowed down, but instead of doing so kept up an average speed. Suddenly there was a clang at the engine bell, a stoppage of the machinery and a commotion on deck, then a crash forward, and we knew there had been a collision.

Amid a panic and a scramble for the boats I saw my girl friend. She was standing on an upper deck, looking down upon the turmoil with remarkable calmness. Some of the sailors had seized a boat for all discipline had vanished and were just cutting loose. It was the last of the boats, the others having gone. Tearing my diamond from my undershirt, in which it was sewed, I held it before the eyes of the man casting off.

"Do you see that? It's a diamond worth a big fortune. I'll give it to you if you'll take that girl up there with you."

He cast a glance at her and said quickly, "Her, not you; only room for one."

Dashing away, I seized her, carried her to the boat, put her in, gave the man my diamond, and she drifted away from me, her eyes fixed on mine in indescribable gratitude till she was lost to sight.

I was one of three men—the survivors of ten—who were picked up on a raft and taken to New York. The newspapers were full of the loss of our ship, the boat in which I had placed my girl friend having been picked up and brought into port a few days before. We of the raft and those in this boat were the only ones saved from the sunken steamer. I noted the address of the girl I had been the means of saving and went to see her.

All she knew was that I had induced a seaman to take her into the boat. That I had bribed him with a fortune she was ignorant. I did not tell her. She was full of gratitude, and I did not care to add to her sense of obligation by telling her that on her account I had put myself back where I was when I started for Port Natal.

We had both gone to the same land, I to acquire wealth to enable me to live in ease, she to make herself useful in a life of ceaseless labor. I had succeeded and given my success that she might not die; she had failed and returned to her home in disappointment. I was still on the threshold of life, with health and strength; she an invalid without the means of gaining a livelihood.
